Presentation

This Proposals Booklet is the result of a well-structured process of systematizing all the proposals sent to the Ministry of Justice and Public Security (MJSP) by the Local Free Conferences (CLL), State Conferences (CE) and National Free Conferences (CLN) that made up the Preparatory Stage of the 2nd National Conference on Migration, Refuge and Statelessness - 2nd COMIGRAR, held between September 2023 and June 2024.

In all, 119 (one hundred and nineteen) conferences were validated, of which 65 (sixty-five) were Free Local, 22 (twenty-two) State and 32 (thirty-two) Free National, resulting in the MJSP receiving 2,151 (two thousand, one hundred and fifty-one) proposals. All of them are available for consultation on the 2nd COMIGRAR website in two formats: by modality (State, National Free or Local Free) and by conference.

This Proposals Booklet seeks to fully represent all the demands and contributions of the various actors involved in the process of holding the Preparatory Stage of the 2nd COMIGRAR, which totaled 14,000 participants, including migrants, refugees and stateless people, ministries, states and the Federal District, municipalities, international organizations and civil society organizations - including entities, educational and research institutions, neighborhood associations and local collectives.

The result, following the systematization of all the contributions received, is a set of 180 (one hundred and eighty) summary proposals, which will be taken as the basis for discussions during the National Conference, organized around sub-themes and themes linked to the 6 (six) thematic axes defined in the Guiding Document - Preparatory Stage.

Below we present the actions that involved the process of systematizing all the 2,151 (two thousand, one hundred and fifty-one) proposals received and wish everyone an enriching participation in the 2nd National Conference on Migration, Refuge and Statelessness - Citizenship on the Move.

National Organizing Committee

METHODOLOGICAL GUIDELINES ON READING THE PROPOSAL BOOKLET

Tabulation of proposals

A total of 359 (three hundred and fifty-nine) proposals were received under Axis 1; 350 (three hundred and fifty) under Axis 2; 269 (two hundred and sixty-nine) under Axis 3; 291 (two hundred and ninety-one) under Axis 4; 319 (three hundred and nineteen) under Axis 5; and 316 (three hundred and sixteen) under Axis 6.

After the validation of the accounts sent by the organizing teams of the Preparatory Stage conferences, the tabulation of all the proposals received began, which were coded, generating a raw proposal code,as shown in the example:

CLL_01_PUB_RJ	+	E1	+	P1	=	CLL_01_PUB_RJ_E1_P1
Conference enrolment code		Axis number		Proposal number		Raw proposal code

The next step was to validate the 2,151 (two thousand, one hundred and fifty-one) proposals received, based on the guidelines set out in the Guiding Document - Preparatory Stage. Therefore, the following were invalidated:

a) Repeated proposals;
b) Proposals officially meant for states and municipalities;
c) Proposals that exceed the six-hundred-character limit;
d) Proposals submitted exceeding the maximum allowed per thematic axis*;
e) Proposals from conferences that did not meet the minimum criteria for the participation of migrants, refugees and stateless people

Once the analysis was complete, 208 (two hundred and eight) proposals were invalidated. However, in order to ensure that no new information was lost, these proposals were compared to the other validated proposals, and it was found that the information was the same. Therefore, there was no loss of content by invalidating the 208 (two hundred and eight) proposals.

*To ensure that new ideas for proposals to be eliminated were not lost, it was checked whether the exclusive contents were incorporated into other proposals from previous conferences. And, in fact, they were, which allowed their elimination without damaging the record of the original contributions.

Thematic analysis of proposals

At this stage, the proposals underwent a new analysis, in which we tried to identify the most prominent issues, called sub-themes, in each of them. In all, 54 (fifty-four) sub-themes were identified, and each proposal may be linked to more than one sub-theme, as the following example illustrates:

Original proposal: "Carry out a local migration census by municipalities and states, and a national census by the IBGE, including sociodemographic mapping of internal and international environmental displacement."

Raw code: CE_24_PUB_AL_E4_P5

Sub-theme 1: Mapping the profile of migrants, refugees, stateless people, and Brazilians abroad

Subtheme 2: Development and monitoring of inclusion indicators

Once the identification process had been completed, a general dictionary (Appendix I) was created, grouping the 54 (fifty-four) sub-themes into 18 (eighteen) general themes, which in turn were linked to the 6 (six) thematic axes of discussion, as illustrated in the table below

Proposal → Sub-theme → Theme → Thematic axis

Systematization of proposals

After being linked to the sub-themes, themes, and thematic axes, all the proposals were systematized based on:

a) Grouping: Proposals with identical sub-themes were consolidated into a single group, and the source codes of each grouped proposal were associated with this group. In all, 54 groups were created, one per sub-theme.

b) Breakdown: Each group created was analyzed individually, and similar information was used to draw up proposals related to the sub-theme, theme, and thematic axis. During this phase, textual fragments associated with other sub-themes were redistributed and used in other proposals.

c) Adaptation: The 180 proposals drawn up were revised, adapted, and grammatically corrected, seeking greater precision of information, but without altering the original content.

d) Partial or total deletion of content: Content deemed legally unenforceable or in violation of human rights was removed, either partially or in its entirety, in order to ensure compliance with international principles and current legislation.

Names of existing federal programs such as "Minha Casa Minha Vida" were sometimes replaced by metonyms such as "housing programs". However, names of possible programs to be developed, such as the "Mães Comunitárias" (Portuguese for “Community Mothers”) program, were kept.

Finally, after review, the summary proposals were coded using summary proposal codes, as shown in the example:

Exemple: CN_E1_T1_S1_P1

Glossary:
CN: Nomenclature for conference mode
E1: Nomenclature for the axis of the proposal
T1: Nomenclature for the theme of the proposal
S1: Nomenclature for the sub-theme of the proposal
P1: Nomenclature for the proposal number

Below are the 180 (one hundred and eighty) proposals drawn up, organized by thematic axis, with their respective codes for the National Conference, as well as the codes of origin on which each summary proposal was based.

Ensure the expansion of national urban mobility programs/plans for the migrant, refugee, and stateless population, in conjunction with federal entities, by establishing orientation flows and protocols at airports, ports and bus stations where these populations are present. Ensure free school transportation for students at all levels of education, including EJA, in all education networks and create specific transportation lines or adapt existing ones for communities displaced by calamities and/or emergencies and Indigenous groups. In addition, implement an integrated transportation system that facilitates access to essential health and education services, especially in remote and rural areas, and develop multilingual information materials about the local transportation system and the right to mobility.

CN_E1_T1_S3_P1

Create or resize public policies to the reality of migrants, refugees, and stateless people, with comprehensive health care, guaranteeing universal access to the SUS, regardless of documentary status; implement specific mental health, women's health, Indigenous health care and LGBTQIA+ programs. Guarantee access to the Stork Network (Rede Cegonha), with intercultural care and humanized childbirth; strengthen the women's protection network, especially in border regions; implement actions to guarantee access to information on sexual and reproductive health for cisgender and transgender women, and people with the capacity to gestate. Recognize and integrate traditional Indigenous medicine practices; implement Integrative Complementary Health Practices; develop occupational health strategies for workers; create specialized services for the prison population, including post-incarceration treatment; guarantee chaperons when accessing public services for PwDs.

Revise SUAS guidelines to integrate migrants, refugees, and stateless people, including specific services in the National Classification of Social Assistance Services, benefits such as Bolsa Família and BPC; adapting CadÚnico to register different family nuclei at the same address; and implement adapted institutional reception protocols. Create a Social Work and Psychology department at the PF and develop services for people in conflict with the law. Create the "Community Mothers" Program as a support network offered by migrant, refugee and stateless women as a care space for children from this population, with public funding and accompanying services, such as those provided by the Guardianship Council, Public Defender's Office and Public Prosecutor's Office, with support from the MS, MEC, MDS and MDHC. In addition, children and adolescents should be included in protection policies guaranteeing access to social assistance.

Establish a comprehensive food and nutrition security program for migrants, refugees, and stateless people by drawing up national guidelines that guarantee access to national food programs and respect the food sovereignty of the various populations. In addition, revise SUAS regulations and national programs to ensure culturally appropriate food in institutional reception spaces; implement culturally sensitive food and nutrition education actions and guarantee the provision of adequate food in shelters, hospitals, schools, and other public reception spaces.

Ensure compliance with CNE Resolution 1/2020 by drawing up and promoting a permanent national program, in partnership with the MEC, implemented in conjunction with state and municipal education departments and accredited universities, focused on continuing training for teachers and education professionals in the public network, addressing multicultural and plurilingual contexts, combating xenophobia, welcoming, and integrating students. It should also improve practices for teaching Portuguese as a host language and raise awareness of issues of gender, sexuality, ethnicity, religion, accessibility, and rights of access to education for migrants, refugees, and stateless people.

Improve services and integrating information by continuing to train the teams at the Reference Centers in cultural, linguistic and religious diversity; develop an integrated system to connect the centers, facilitating the sharing of information, the mapping of the migrant population and the monitoring of regularization processes; create support spaces in each state to facilitate coordination with consulates and embassies; and implement specific sectors in the centers, with priority service provided by specialized professionals, aimed at vulnerable groups such as Indigenous people, women victims of violence, children, the elderly, LGBTQIA+ and PwD.

Encourage the creation of a national program of institutional reception infrastructure for migrants, refugees and stateless people, including the Indigenous community, through the creation of temporary housing spaces, social rental programs or the construction of reception houses in border states, with the participation of this population in the management of the sites, qualified multi-professional staff, basic health care and education with psychologists, infectious disease doctors, social workers and translators. In addition, regulate the creation of shelters, halfway houses and humanized service points in bus stations and airports, respecting family and cultural ties, including specific spaces for women and LGBTQIA+ victims of violence; prioritize quality food and access to decent housing; and promote cultural events that foster social cohesion and mutual respect between populations.

CN_E1_T4_S2_P2

Implement PF (Federal Police) posts, especially in dry border regions, airports, ports and bus stations, which operate 24 hours a day at the borders, promote qualified reception staff for humanitarian assistance and make available materials that provide guidance on the rights and guarantees of migrants, refugees and stateless people. In addition, standardize and improve the PF's scheduling system, enabling the creation or improvement of multilingual digital platforms to facilitate access to information and services, such as online scheduling, and monitoring of regularization processes, among others.

Create intercultural reception and coexistence facilities in cities with the largest migrant, refugee, and stateless populations, functioning as points of cultural reference and integration, with information in several languages; cultural meetings and events; trained assistance in specific cultural and socio-economic aspects; inclusive educational activities, with sign language interpreters for deaf people, and promotion of interactions through interfaith activities. Encourage the preservation of cultures and the exchange of experiences, with events focused on the creative economy; maintain the family ties of the prison population through international calls; and promote after-school events focused on sports for the elderly and/or PwD, as well as culture and languages for the children of migrant women, guaranteeing access to education and facilitating the integration of these women into the job market.

Create and strengthen the "Community Mothers" program, a support network that provides care for children from migrant, refugee, and stateless families, allowing migrant women to enter the formal labor market. The program will receive public funding and will be accompanied by essential services such as the Guardianship Council and the MoH, promoting expanded access to protection and reception services, with gender-sensitive psychosocial care, especially for women in border regions and shelters. Also, guarantee access to formal jobs, expanding the supply of daycare and early childhood support, respecting labor rights and facilitating access to the women's protection network, and implementing programs inspired by existing initiatives to ensure the well-being of migrant, refugee and stateless women and their families.

Establish a national continuing education program for health, SUSP and social assistance professionals, as well as community workers and social protection teams. The program should also prioritize non-discriminatory, culturally sensitive care adapted to the specificities of the migrant, refugee, and stateless population, addressing racial, ethnic, gender, religious, age, sexual orientation, and mental health diversity. In addition, it should include instructions on physical and mental health rights; the functioning of the SUS, ethnic-racial issues; protocols for women (cisgender and transgender) who are victims of rights violations; strategies for combating domestic and family violence; reporting channels and the IPE System; guidance on not requiring identification in cases of social and cultural incapacity; and information on documentation and migratory regularization for health treatment, in collaboration with the PF.

Implement an integrated digital platform for knowledge management and intersectoral training, aimed at continuing education for civil servants from all three spheres, civil society professionals, notaries, unions, bank employees, security, and inspection agents. The platform will include a multilingual virtual learning environment with open educational resources; a collaborative repository for storing content produced by government bodies and civil society entities; an interactive forum for exchanging experiences and good practices; a system for managing inter-institutional partnerships, facilitating collaboration between universities, NGOs, migrant associations and public sectors; a digital library for developing and implementing public awareness and information campaigns; and a communication interface with professional councils and higher education institutions for aligning curricula and validating competencies.

Implement a system for monitoring, evaluating and continuously improving training programs, which also collects feedback from trained professionals and the population served, allowing for constant adjustments to content and methodologies. In addition, create performance indicators to measure the impact of training on care and carry out research on training needs and results; promote the participation of migrant, refugee and stateless organizations in the evaluation, establishing reporting mechanisms that welcome diverse cultures and languages; and create an observatory of good practices by developing periodic reports on the progress of continuing education and holding seminars to share experiences and learning.

Implement a national language training and intercultural service program for civil servants from all three spheres, prioritizing agents from the PF and SUSP, civil society professionals and multidisciplinary teams of translators and cultural mediators. The program will integrate functional progression, offering free courses in relevant languages (English, Spanish, French, Creole, Warao, other Amerindian languages and Yoruba) in partnership with IFs, universities, and government schools. A multilingual and intercultural service system will be implemented, with the hiring of interpreters, simultaneous translation equipment, a multilingual switchboard, and a guarantee of bilingual service in sectoral public services.

Create a comprehensive federal program to monitor the labor supply chain, focusing on migrants, refugees, and stateless people, to prevent labor exploitation and guarantee fair pay, benefits and working conditions. Establish specific restrictions and harsher penalties for employers who violate rights, including making major brands in the production chain responsible. In addition, articulate the creation of specific sectors or areas in the MPT and DPU to deal with this population, preventing high-risk professional vacancies from being allocated exclusively to migrants, refugees, and stateless people.

Develop an integrated system for monitoring labor practices and protecting migrants, refugees and stateless people, including a specific ombudsman channel and a multilingual app for reporting rights violations, with diligent follow-up of cases. Provide information materials with QR codes in at least four languages. This system should promote coordination between federal and local bodies to effectively monitor working conditions, using public health facilities as a signpost for cases of exploitation and including intercultural mediators in the inspection of workplaces.

Implement an integrated national system for the revalidation of professional (higher, technical and initial and continuing training) and basic education diplomas and certificates for migrants, refugees and stateless people, regardless of their documentary status; reduce bureaucracy and speeding up the process, guaranteeing exemption from fees and emoluments for people who are economically disadvantaged, relaxing the requirement for documents such as the Hague Apostille and the nomination of teachers, and dispensing with sworn translations; create commissions with migrant professionals to apply knowledge assessment tests that cover the required documentation, encouraging the expansion of the structure of state councils for the revalidation of basic and technical education diplomas.

Amend MEC Ordinance No. 1.051/2023, with a view to easing the documentary requirements for revalidating diplomas, especially for migrants, refugees and stateless people from countries experiencing serious and widespread human rights violations and political and economic destabilization. The changes would be aimed at removing Item IV, Art. 9, which requires the "name and title of the teaching staff linked to the subjects taken by the applicant, authenticated by the institution responsible for the degree" and repealing Paragraph 1, Item VI, Art. 9, which deals with the requirement to apostille documents for countries that are not signatories to the Hague Convention.

Create a federal program with optimized criteria for the revalidation of diplomas through: simplified document analysis; elimination of the requirement for sworn translations of documents; establishment of partnerships with accredited universities, international organizations and an accredited network of migrant, refugee and stateless translators to carry out translations or implementation of an official platform; implementation of alternative mechanisms to prove academic training for cases in which full documentation cannot be provided due to exceptional circumstances; creation of a single national fee, with the possibility of exemption for cases of declared hypo-sufficiency; consolidation of bilateral agreements with other countries to facilitate the recognition and equivalence of university and technical diplomas.

Include the position of Intercultural Mediator in the Brazilian Code of Occupations; expand social security agreements taking into account professional experiences in the country of origin and create a program to offer support and care for the children of migrant, refugee and stateless women, prioritizing places in public nurseries, full-day schools or after-school activities. In addition, broaden the eligibility criteria in the "Academic Solidarity" call to hire as professors and researchers not only refugees, but also migrants and stateless people, recognizing their strategic potential for local and regional development. Ensure the continuity of temporary or permanent hiring, via competitive examination, when they come from special calls for proposals such as CAPES PNpD or CNPq PrOFIX.

Implement a national professional qualification program for migrants, refugees, and stateless people, offering Portuguese language and vocational courses through online and face-to-face platforms. The program should be financed by a National Training Fund, managed by a tripartite National Council (Civil Society, Government and Beneficiaries), and will rely on partnerships between companies, higher education institutions, FIs and Sistema S. Guarantee 5% of places in the S System's qualification programs for migrants, offering grants to help them stay and making the documentation required for enrolment more flexible. Include quotas in courses such as PRONATEC and Via Rápida, create initiatives such as "Young Intercultural Apprentices", and ensure priority and multilingual service at SINE agencies.

Implement a national program to promote entrepreneurship for migrants, refugees, and stateless people, offering lines of credit with flexible guarantees and preferential rates, including microcredit. At the same time, promote entrepreneurial training through partnerships, for example, with SEBRAE, SENAI and universities, covering topics such as financial management, marketing and legislation; create fairs and spaces dedicated to marketing products and services, facilitating participation in public tenders; and recognize migrant artisans, guaranteeing access to social benefits such as the National Artisan's Card. In addition, offer debt negotiation opportunities for MEIs and credit lines with rates equivalent to those offered to national entrepreneurs.

Create fairs and spaces dedicated to marketing the products and services of migrant, refugee, and stateless entrepreneurs, as well as facilitating their participation in public tenders and recognizing them as artisans when they sell handicrafts, especially Indigenous populations. Implement an educational website covering information on services, cultural events, associations, rights and duties, and local administrative practices; and train security and inspection agents on the work of self-employed migrants and street vendors, producing regularization policies and granting work permits that are accessible and independent of migratory status.

Draw up an MEC guideline related to inclusive education policy, recognizing diversity and adopting the following measures: include the option of dietary restrictions for cultural reasons on the registration form; make school attendance more flexible for religious festivities; create multilingual and intercultural teaching, learning and literary materials for libraries; and adapt the dress code for physical education classes. Create mechanisms to encourage schools to adopt the theme of migration and refuge, including resources for the purchase of teaching materials and ensuring compliance with themes related to interculturality in national programs such as the FNDE and the PNLD; support the completion of basic education studies for Brazilians abroad, fostering partnerships with local associations to provide study spaces, libraries and pedagogical guidance for the ENCCEJA.

Implement a national intercultural and linguistic mediation program, prioritizing the hiring of migrants, refugees, and stateless people, especially women, Indigenous people and the LGBTQIA+ population, including training in human rights, public policies, and cultural diversity. Review and approve Bill 5182/2020 to make it compulsory to allocate translators, community interpreters and cultural mediators at Brazil's main entry points, covering languages such as Creole, Warao, Arabic, Persian and sign languages, as well as public services, especially in DELEMIGs, hospitals, schools, social assistance centers, the justice system, and prisons. In addition, acquire translation technologies and make simultaneous translation platforms available in public facilities.

Design and implement a National Program for Teaching Portuguese as a Reception Language (PLAc) for migrants, refugees and stateless people, in partnership with public and private educational institutions, including universities, federal institutes and public schools, offering free courses, with documentary flexibility, in face-to-face and distance learning modalities, through a multilingual distance learning platform; in addition to guaranteeing the issuance of certificates recognized by the MEC, valid for naturalization processes and proof of language proficiency. It also includes the creation of an app for teaching Portuguese and expanding the range of courses, timetables, and workloads, with special attention to vulnerable groups such as people with disabilities, the elderly, and the prison population.

Implement a national program to provide translation into other languages and interpretation/mediation in government services, public documents, and computerized systems. Create multilingual applications, ensuring that information materials are available in several languages in government agencies, health units, schools, airports, bus stations and other high-traffic areas. This program should include the translation of official websites, forms, booklets, and audiovisual material with information on rights, duties, access to public services, professional training programs, good pedagogical practices in reception and integration processes in schools and good health practices for community agents and migrant communities; sexual and reproductive health care networks.

Develop and implement a national program of educational and awareness campaigns on the rights of migrants, refugees, and stateless people, addressing issues such as combating xenophobia, slave-like labor, domestic violence, and other forms of discrimination. These campaigns should be broadcast in the various languages spoken in Brazil, using official channels, social media, and public spaces, and with the active participation of migrant leaders and artists in their preparation and dissemination.

Periodically prepare/revise multilingual information materials, in partnership with government agencies and civil society entities, so that they are available in various formats (booklets, apps, websites, pamphlets, posters and QR Codes) and contain comprehensive information on document regularization, visa issuance, the rights and duties of migrants, refugees and stateless people, as well as access to public and private services and social programs. The materials will also cover mechanisms for dealing with rights violations, information on human smuggling and trafficking, sexual and reproductive health, sexual, gender, age, racial and ethnic diversity, and for people with disabilities, as well as the specific rights of children, adolescents, women, and the elderly, in accordance with Brazilian legislation. The Tenancy Law will also be addressed, guaranteeing access to safe housing, and protocols for inclusion in the workplace, with attention to the needs of specific communities.

Create a federal agency specialized in migration, linked to the MJSP, responsible for centralizing document regularization processes, including humanitarian visas, temporary residence, and refugee requests; implement differentiated flows for regular migration, forced displacement and family reunion processes. In addition, it has an ombudsman's office to receive complaints and help migrants, refugees and stateless people with documentation and socio-economic integration issues; in addition, regionalize service points in cities with greater demand and unifying services in one place, facilitating access to the various types of documentation and services.

Create a National Fund for Migration, Refugees and Statelessness, with its own budget allocation guaranteed in the LDO and LOA, managed by a tripartite National Council (Civil Society, Government and beneficiaries), with supervisory and propositional attributions, and with mechanisms for transfer to states and municipalities, transparency and efficiency, including indicators in planning instruments and the creation of basic operating standards for migration policy. The fund will be responsible for financing essential social assistance, health, education, culture, work, and income services, with a focus on border regions and cities with the greatest migratory flow. In addition, it will promote the implementation of housing programs and training for professionals; support consular services for Brazilians abroad, migratory regularization and research into migration, refuge, and statelessness.

Draw up and implement a National Migration, Refugee and Statelessness Plan with intersectoral guidelines for actions in health, education, work, housing, and social assistance, considering issues of gender, race, ethnicity, sexual orientation, age, and disability. The plan should create mechanisms to consolidate rights under the Migration Law, promote social participation with councils at federal, state and municipal levels; establish standards for the integration of migrants, refugees and stateless people; provide for a national migration data system; guarantee access to public services without barriers; specific budget provision and encourage co-financing between federal entities, as well as strategies against racism and discrimination.

Create an inter-federative structure for migration management and reception, with focal points in the three federal entities to implement the National Plan for Migration, Refuge and Statelessness in the areas of health, social assistance, education, public security, culture and housing; guarantee, through the MPI and MJSP, cultural reception and access to constitutional rights for migrants, refugees, stateless people and native peoples. In addition, strengthen the capacity of governments to manage migration effectively and humanely; institutionalize public reception policies to reduce dependence on civil society; and create coordination to implement an integrated plan to combat hunger and poverty, with social assistance programs.

Decentralize the work of government entities responsible for migratory and document regularization through regional reference centers for the migrant, refugee and stateless population; implement service modalities that integrate and reduce bureaucracy in places where other types of documentation are issued (RG, CNH, CPF), as well as training in different areas of work to promote socio-economic integration. In addition, it should work with state governments, in bilateral collaboration with other countries, to bring together all the services for this population in one building.

Implement, via Operação Acolhida, a federal emergency shelter program, in conjunction with states and municipalities, especially in the areas of interiorization coordinated by the federal government. The program should consider issues of gender and age violence, maintaining an intersectional approach to race, gender, class, and sexual orientation, focusing on strengthening and improving orderly, safe, and regular migratory flows, especially at land borders. Strategies include: socio-economic emancipation; access to decent housing, scheduling humanitarian and/or rescue flights to countries with impediments to family reunion; identification and mapping of critical areas; partnerships with local and international civil organizations for humanitarian assistance; mechanisms for reporting and responding quickly to rights violations; training of local public officials; monitoring and labor protection; and health promotion for workers.

Draw up and implement a national protocol for welcoming migrants, refugees and stateless people in Brazil by establishing guiding parameters for effective access to all public services; ensuring equal and humanized service; reduce bureaucracy and eliminate barriers to access to migration regularization processes, issuing documents, programs, projects, services, social assistance benefits and public policies; include technical guidelines for nationally typified service, promoting intercultural reception and accessible language, as well as creating a flowchart involving all the bodies that work on the issue.

Develop an integrated system between the various national public services to simplify the documentation and registration processes for migrants, refugees and stateless people by creating or revising a platform similar to the CadÚnico and Gov.br systems for collecting and permanently storing documents, guiding the process of sending pre-documentation, directing scheduling and allowing consultation of the status of the process. In addition, this system should be integrated with the Carteira Digital do Migrante application, making it easier to monitor processes and applications to public bodies.

Set up multilingual national ombudsmen (hotline) with cultural mediators for migrants, refugees, and stateless people, integrated into municipalities with more than 200,000 inhabitants, states and the Federal District; as well as the Human Rights Commission of the Chamber of Deputies. The aim is to receive and record complaints about violations of rights and difficulties in accessing benefits, programs, and initiatives, as well as carrying out analyses and referrals for improvements. The ombudsmen must have a team specialized in humanized service in the main languages of these groups, guaranteeing access to rights and prevention of violations, as well as safe spaces and channels for service and complaints

Establish joint transnational plans with protocols and flows for dealing with discriminatory crimes against migrants, refugees, and stateless people, especially the cross-border population, with a view to preventing and dealing with various forms of violence (domestic violence, sexual exploitation of children and adolescents, human trafficking and work analogous to slavery, among others). Actions should include psychosocial care, referrals to the competent bodies and facilitation of means of proof, taking into account the vulnerability of the victims; expanding the methodology and competence of the Specialized Police Stations for crimes of xenophobia.

Carry out campaigns in the main national media to tackle rights violations, focusing on combating xenophobia, racism, and other forms of discrimination against migrants, refugees and stateless people, especially Indigenous people. Campaigns should include raising awareness about the culture, religion, and habits of this population, highlighting their contribution to Brazil; distribution throughout the country of printed and virtual materials; information via radio, television, and social media. Train journalists to publish stories that reduce discrimination and xenophobia.

Promote awareness campaigns and permanent education in municipal, state, technical schools and state and federal universities, as well as family associations linked to educational spaces and community networks, considering the cross-cutting nature of content related to gender, sexual orientation, age, disability, race, ethnicity, belief, religion, culture and nationality, among others, with a focus on migrants, refugees and stateless people, as well as the rights and duties of this population, the forms of violence they face and the protection and reporting mechanisms available. The campaigns should include strategies to prevent xenophobic bullying, in line with the MEC's guidelines for education in the country.

Establish a month to raise awareness about migration, refuge, and statelessness and to combat xenophobia, including Migrant and Refugee Week, from June 19 to 23, in accordance with Law 14.678/2023. Develop awareness-raising initiatives in various sectors of society, with campaigns on the social rights of this population, using culturally sensitive and effective strategies that involve public authorities, civil society, and international organizations. Promote cultural events that represent the diversity of peoples or countries, disseminate information, and integrate languages between school and community through cultural mediators in pedagogical training. Implement mechanisms for evaluating and monitoring the impact of actions, guaranteeing the effectiveness of initiatives to raise awareness and combat discrimination.

Promote awareness campaigns on work analogous to slavery and discrimination against migrants, refugees, and stateless people in the labor market, taking gender issues into account. The actions will be aimed at public authorities, private initiative, and civil society, using official channels and strategic points of great circulation. They will include talks at different times and in public facilities, as well as the distribution of translated information materials publicizing reporting channels.

Set up working groups to debate the legal protection of Indigenous communities in situations of migration, refuge, and statelessness, facilitating the recognition of people who identify themselves as Indigenous peoples from outside Brazil, incorporating the nomenclature "Indigenous peoples from outside Brazil" into the race/color categories of IBGE surveys and censuses. Guarantee spaces for Indigenous people, promoting their inclusion in Brazilian public Indigenous policies, in accordance with the rights guaranteed in the 1988 Federal Constitution. Articulate with FUNAI to recognize refugee and migrant Indigenous ethnic groups, adapting social assistance, education, health, work and income generation, housing, and culture policies for their integration into the Brazilian community, considering the peri-urban context and facilitating access to differentiated rights.

Establish a national policy and/or plan to care for migrant, refugee, and stateless women, with a specific federal budget allocation, guaranteeing protection and discussion on gender-based violence and transnational maternity. Ensure equal access to housing, education, work, income generation, health, and social assistance, as well as combat domestic and gender-based violence. Create support centers or points at the Casa da Mulher Brasileira and other public spaces, offering information on rights, public services, job opportunities and Portuguese language courses. Implement programs focused on mental health and promote culturally sensitive campaigns against gender inequality, domestic violence and femicide, using multilingual information materials.

Ensure that migrant, refugee, and stateless women have access to formal employment, expanding the supply of daycare and early childhood support. Ensure access to the Stork Network, considering ethnic-racial diversity, especially for Indigenous migrants, with intercultural assistance and language mediation, respecting the right to humanized and culturally sensitive childbirth. Include a gender approach and transnational maternity in the national policy on migration, refuge, and statelessness, guaranteeing access to house arrest and other rights that facilitate remote care for their children, including incarcerated and ex-incarcerated women.

Implement measures to ensure that migrants in detention or in prison have access to lawyers and advocates with intercultural and linguistic competence, reinforcing national guidelines on the rights of migrants, refugees and stateless people deprived of their liberty. Create an ombudsman's office to monitor compliance with these guidelines in prison units, providing for the hiring of previously incarcerated migrants to work in these services. In addition, create services to empower migrants when they leave prison.

Include the LGBTQIA+ migrant, refugee, and stateless population in policies to prevent and combat hate crimes and intolerance, guaranteeing their right to their social name and to sensitive and qualified assistance. Create regulations that allow people to change their gender identity and social name in SISCONARE and in refugee application documents at any time. Set up referral centers for black migrant women and/or the LGBTQIA+ population, with professionals trained to meet their specific needs, developing protocols that take into account the oppressions faced, considering cultural and linguistic diversity, guaranteeing humanized care and promoting relevant cultural practices, and suppressing sexism, racism, LGBTQIA-phobia and xenophobia in health contexts.

FINAL PROVISIONS

The closing of the 2nd COMIGRAR National Conference in Brasilia-DF does not mark the end, but rather the expansion of debates and mobilization around the improvement of public policies offered by the Union, states, municipalities and the Federal District, with the aim of consolidating the social participation of migrants, refugees and stateless people in the formulation of policies, programs and actions for individuals and families, as well as deepening the inclusion of the issue, in a cross-cutting manner, in the different existing sectoral public policies.

The mobilization process will also require a continued effort from society as a whole in its daily struggles to implement public policies that benefit these populations in Brazil. Although the Conference cannot solve all the challenges listed, it plays a crucial role in pointing the way and establishing possible consensus in the near future.

Therefore, the proposals prioritized during the Final Plenary of the 2nd COMIGRAR National Conference will undergo grammatical revision and layout and will be made publicly available through the MJSP's official channels. They will then be incorporated into the basic texts of policies, plans and programs of the Ministry of Justice and Public Security and may also serve as a reference for other competent government bodies for possible incorporation into national policies.

The Ministry of Justice and Public Security expresses its sincere gratitude to all the institutions, organizations, participants and, especially, to migrants, refugees and stateless people, whose contributions are fundamental to the advancement of public policies. The commitment of everyone strengthens the participatory process and reaffirms Brazil's commitment to defending the rights of these populations.
