(Annual Meeting 2023 Multilateral Meetings Programme)

Active participation Invited

This multilateral will bring together high-level public and private actors to discuss the transition to a standing forest, sustainable bioeconomy in the Amazon Basin. Participants will discuss potential financing pathways, including de-risking mechanisms, and explore how successful approaches could be used by jurisdictions in the Amazon to transition to an economy that delivers benefits for people and planet.

(Congress Centre, Jakobshorn)

- Ilona Szabó de Carvalho (Confirmed), President, Igarape Institute, Brazil (Moderated by)

15:00 - 16:30 Your Roundtable entitled IGWEL: Charting the Course to COP28

Active participation with remarks Invited

(Annual Meeting)

The window for addressing climate change is fast closing, with the UN saying it is “now or never” to limit global warming. As leaders take stock of COP27 outcomes and set an agenda for COP28, how can the public and private sectors work together to raise climate and nature ambition, implement commitments and accelerate deployment of finance?

(Congress Centre, Parsenn)

- Børge Brende (Confirmed), President, World Economic Forum (Chaired by)
- Gim Huay Neo (Confirmed), Managing Director, Centre for Nature and Climate, World Economic Forum (Closing Remarks by)

17:30 - 18:15 Your Stakeholder Dialogue entitled The Amazon at a Crossroads

Panellist Invited

Home to more than 30 million people, the Amazon is the Earth’s largest rainforest and the world’s richest biological reservoir. The absence of immediate action on ecosystem degradation will affect the lives of its inhabitants and the stability of global climate systems.

How to strengthen collaboration and enable the bio-economy of the Amazon to deliver sustainable benefits for people and planet?

(Congress Centre, Aspen 2)
